BNAI BRITH PROVIDES RECREATION ROOMS FOR U. S. NEGRO MILITARY PERSONNEL

An oil painting of Lt. Sidney P. Brooks, Cleveland airman and the first Negro pilot killed in the war, was presented to Karamu House, a Negro community center, by the Cleveland Bnai Brith War Service Council in the presence of white and Negro civic and educational leaders. Commissioned by Bnai Brith, the portrait was first unveiled before the entire school assembly of Central High School, of which Lt. Brooks was an alumnus. Leo M. Ascherman, member of Bnai Brith National War Service Committee, presented the portrait, which was accepted by Russell Jelliffe, director of Karamu House.

Presentation of the portrait of Lt. Brooks was accompanied by an announcement from Mr. Ascherman that Bnai Brith has furnished 20 recreation facilities for Negro military personnel at various U.S. Army installations throughout the country. Some weeks ago, the Harlem Defense Recreation Center presented a special citation to the New York City Bnai Brith War Service Council in recognition of its services in providing recreation facilities for Negro Military personnel in the New York area.

New Demand Made For Jewish Army

A new demand for creation of an all-Jewish military unit in this to play a role in the "invasion and liberation of Europe" has been made to the Governments of the United States and Great Britain by the semi-official Jewish Agency for Palestine, it was revealed by Dr. Nahum Goldmann, the organization's political representative in the U.S. and the chairman of the administrative committee of the World Jewish Congress.

In his first interview since his return on March 27 from a six-week visit to London, where he conferred with United Nations leaders on problems affecting world Jewry, Dr. Goldmann declared the military and political considerations that had made it impossible to organize a Jewish force earlier were no longer existent.

"When it was proposed to form a Jewish military unit in the Middle East, the answer was given that the step was not feasible because it would enrage the Arabs," he recalled. "Now the war has shifted to Europe. The danger of the Arabs uniting our North African battle lines is gone.

"The Jewish Agency for Palestine, the only Jewish body in the world with formal status, a few days ago asked for the immediate creation of Jewish divisions to fight as distinct entities. We do not insist upon Jewish generals commanding them, but it is a moral necessity of the highest order to enable the Jewish people, the first and most tragic victims of Nazism, to take part as a definite unit in the final defeat of the Nazis."

Dr. Goldmann [illegible]

A speaking tour of the country of European Jews before the invasion, Dr. Goldmann warned that the "period of liberation of the Continent" may be the worst they have suffered.

Dr. Goldmann declared that any post-war restoration of rights to Jews "would not mean much" unless accompanied by a definite re-

Jews In Rumania Do Slave Labor

All Rumanian Jews between 17 and 27 years of age are mobilized for labor camps. Since the discipline in these camps is as strict as that in concentration camps, the new call up is believed to have portended a new anti-Semitic drive.

Last month, 17 and 18-year-old Jews whether at school or not, were called up for snow clearing.

A recent regulation issued by the General Commissariat for Jewish Questions orders all Jews who are officials of the Jewish central and branch offices and who are under 27, to do compulsory labor service. All exemptions were cancelled from February 2. Whenever necessary, the officials will be replaced by Jews who have already served their labor term in deported labor detachments.

The chief of the Commissariat declared that many Bucharest Jews who should pay fees for exemption from labor service try to evade payment. Anyone evading payment is being deprived of his exemption, irrespective of whether he regards himself as "irreplaceable for the country's economy," in whatever capacity.

New exemptions are issued for poor Jews who have worked for over a year in labor detachments, far from their homes. The families of such Jews are requested to file the necessary applications.

All Jews between 27 and 28, living in the Dniest (the most westerly area of Rumania) who were still at home and not yet classified had to report in Timisoara. Jews with a university education and former reserve officers were exempted.

The following Jews have been sentenced to death by Antonescu for having escaped from compulsory labor: Samuel Leopold (27), of Focsani; Adolf Zeller, of Braila; Hermann Goldstein (28), of Petrila; Ludovica Grunbaum (36), in Focsani; Abraham Abramsky (27), of Petrila; Josef Helmuth (48), of Ilia; and Mano Berger (34), of Dumasti.

Over 300 trade authorizations of Jews have been annulled, according to an announcement in the Bukarester Tageblatt.

Jews who were compelled by law to leave their posts in the Rumanian Civil Service are entitled to draw pensions even though they did not serve for the full qualifying period, according to the interpretation of the High Court of Cassation (the highest court in the land) in a recent test case.

The case concerned two Jews, Constantin Negrel, a former magistrate, and David Brodmann, a former detective, who, because of the Rumanian racial laws, were compelled to leave their posts after serving for 20 and 21 years respectively instead of the required 30 years. An appeal by the Pensions Authority against a decision of the lower courts awarding the Jews pensions was dismissed by the higher court.

Jews who are nationals of States with which Rumania has reciprocal agreements may be exempt from dispossession of their property.

Wigram, Killed In Italy, Wrote Battle Manual

An officer who is considered one of the leading figures among those who laid the foundations of victory for Britain was Major Lionel Wigram, of the Royal Fusiliers. He was killed while leading a detachment of Italian irregulars on the Eighth Army front. He was 37 years old.

Before the war Major Wigram had achieved marked success as a solicitor in London—in 1938 he carried out what was believed to be one of the biggest property deals known in this country, the sale of the Cardiff estate of the Marquess of Bute, which involved the sum of £4,000,000. He was a captain in the Territorials, and inspired by a report written by General Alexander after Dunkirk he applied himself to revising old methods of infantry training.

He started, and was the first commandant of, the battle school on which all the others have since been modelled. He wrote the book on Battle Drill which is now the standard manual for army training, and when the Commander-in-Chief (then General Paget) decided that every division should have its battle school he appointed him with the rank of Lieut.-Col. as Commandant of the G.H.Q. school for the training of instructors.

Lt.-Col. Wigram later left the school to take part in the campaign in Sicily—as an observer. He went where the fighting was fiercest and brought back information (illustrated with photographs he had taken) to provide additional [illegible]

Major Wigram was the son of Maurice Wigram, formerly of Sheffield (where he was in business, and was president of the congregation for many years) and now a resident of Brighton. Mr. Wigram is nearly 80 years old and is a Talmudical scholar—he studied at the Volozyn Yeshiva. Lionel was a student at the King Edward's School, Sheffield, and Queen's College, Oxford, says the London Jewish Chronicle.

In the Jewish community the late officer took a keen interest in the Home for Incurables and was president of the North-West London Aid Society before the war. He started a hostel for refugee Jewish children and was in other ways active in the cause of the refugees, for whom he ran a fair in the grounds of his house, Moray Lodge, Kensington. He was a member of the West London Synagogue, Berkeley Street.

Among the many letters of sympathy received by the family was one sent to Major Wigram's only brother, Dr. N. G. Wigram, by an officer in the Guards who lost a leg in the North African campaign, and who wrote "I am certain he must have been most pleased to see how well his teaching worked out in practice. There are few men who have done more for the efficiency of the Army than he."

U. S. Will Not Try To Dissuade Britain From Palestine Policy

The House Foreign Affairs Committee voted on March 17 to postpone consideration of resolutions which would put Congress on record as favoring the free entry of Jews into Palestine, and the eventual establishment of a Jewish commonwealth in that area.

Representative Sol Bloom, Democrat, of New York, chairman of the committee, announced that "advice and information given to us by those responsible for the conduct of the war, have convinced the committee that action upon the resolutions at this time would be unwise." He added that the resolutions had not been tabled, indicating they expected it to be taken up later on.

Mr. Bloom made it clear that he personally voted against the motion to postpone consideration of the resolutions. This was believed to be the first time that the committee under Mr. Bloom's chairmanship has not acted by unanimous vote.

The committee action apparently ended the last hope of formal intervention by any branch of the American government to dissuade the British government from enforcing the White Paper of 1939, which virtually bars further Jewish immigration into Palestine after the end of the month. President Roosevelt has said this government never officially approved the British action, nor has it taken any official act of disapproval.

With his statement Mr. Bloom made public a letter from Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of War, which said: "It is the considered judgment of the War Department that without reference to the merits of these resolutions, their action on them at this time would be prejudicial to the successful prosecution of the war."

General George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, it has been learned, testified previously in the same vein before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee considering identical resolutions.

Representative Ranulf Compton, Republican, of Connecticut, co-author of the resolutions with Representative James A. Wright, Democrat, of Pennsylvania, announced that he was "deeply

AT THE SERVICEMEN'S CENTRE IN MONTREAL

So many men in uniform from all over the world come to the Servicemen's Centre in Montreal that on a crowded afternoon it seems like an International House. One day a Negro soldier came up to the desk and spoke happily about what it meant to him "to be among his own people". He explained that he was one of the Falashas of Africa, purported descendants of the son of King Solomon and the Queen of Sheba, of whom Haile Selassie, King of Ethiopia, is said to be one. Like every other serviceman who registers from anywhere, he was made to feel at home right away, and was so glad to have found the right place. "Everybody seems to belong here, and that's why we have coming back. It's like being at a private party," another soldier said, and when [illegible]

At the Centre, soldiers can predict great things with the famous Ouija board which is supposed to tell nothing but the truth, and which is just the thing to match the riotous and extravagant imagination of its users. The U. S. Army sergeant worked hard over it to find out whether he would be shipped the next week, and when he had to give it up as an impossible job, he decided that the Ouija board is a patriot and doesn't tell military secrets. But when he left he said there's one thing that is no secret: The Canadian Jewish Congress Centres are famous for good times with plenty of fun. And how!

MARRIAGES

Goodman-Rosenberg

The marriage of Helen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Rosenberg, Austin Terrace, to Bernard Maxwell Goodman, of Truro, N.S., son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Goodman, of New Glasgow, N.S., took place on March 5, at the home of the bride's parents, Rabbi Samuel Sachs officiating. Mrs. Simeon Joyce, pianist, and Isador Desser, violinist, played the wedding music. Tall standards of all-white sweet-peas, stocks and roses covered the fern-banked alcove where the ceremony took place. The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a dress of opal-blue crepe, the moulded bodice fashioned with a deep, square neckline. Her matching hat was misted with matching blue veiling and she carried a miniature cascade of baby Calla lilies, swainsona, and freesia. Mrs. S. Herovitz, sister of the groom, was the bride's only attendant, wearing midnight-blue with fuchsia-colored accessories, and carried a miniature cascade of Butterfly sweetpeas and coral-colored roses. Pte. Bertram Rosenberg, brother of the bride, was best man, and the ushers were: Lieut. Burrell Singer, cousin of the bride, and Lieut. Boris Swerling. Mrs. Rosenberg received in wood-violet crepe, with accented and matching trimming, matching hat, and shoulder bouquet of carnations, violets, and pink roses. The couple left for the Maritimes, the bride travelling in a Victorian violet-colored ensemble, under a topcoat of sheared otter. They will live in Truro.

...ial Secretary Calls Duplessis Speech On ... Immigration Conspiracy Immense Hoax

... a spirited debate in which ...Hector Perrier, Provincial ...ry, stated he favored maintenance of existing restrictions on ...ation, the Legislative Assembly March 15, unanimously ...ed the Duplessis motion calling for the production of correspondence exchanged between the Provincial and Federal Governments relative to immigration. ...al M.L.A.'s voiced opposition to ...n immigration into Canada in post-war period.

... centred around charges ... Opposition leader, Hon. ... Duplessis at Ste. Claire, ... County, last fall of a ... anti-Semitic society established ... Jews from Ste. Claire.

Duplessis at Ste. Claire as an immense hoax invented by Mr. Duplessis or some of his friends. The society named in the letter read at Ste. Claire by Mr. Duplessis had never existed, Rostovitz was not listed in the Montreal and New York directories and Rabbi Schwartz never resided at the Mount Royal Hotel, according to a letter from one of the latter's officers, Mr. Perrier said. These facts went to prove, Mr. Perrier continued, that the assertions of the Opposition leader were false and that whatever he might say about the matter in the future would be held as subject to suspicion. The whole episode was an invention meant as a political balloon and an attempt to raise race prejudice against the Jews in the province, he said.

... of Parliament ... equity or morality to ... in the House of Commons ... scheme viz., the restriction on Jews in the province of Quebec of 100,000 Jewish ... of Central Europe.").

... country, but was against the mating of Quebec as enclosure for French Canadians. French Canadians, he said, were able to take care of themselves against any other race, and need not fear the competition of other races.

Speaking on immigration during the war, Mr. Perrier said that it must not be forgotten that above considerations of race and religion, there was the Christian principle of charity to the neighbor. Of the immigrants who entered Canada during the war, there were thousands of French fleeing the Nazi domination over their conquered motherland, as well as refugees from many other conquered countries. Surely, the speaker said, no one claiming to be a Christian could object to their presence in Canada. Pope Pius XI had called the attention and sympathy of all free nations to the plight of these refugees, he said; so had Jacques Maritain, the great Catholic philosopher. Their opinion was no doubt as respectable as that of the Opposition speakers, Mr. Perrier added.

In his concluding remarks, Mr. Perrier said he preferred to follow the principles of Christian charity and humanity rather than the demagogic principles of the National Union party.

In reply, Mr. Duplessis said that the Rostovitz letter had come into his possession by chance. The best evidence of the authenticity of the letter, he said, was the fact that immediately afterwards a campaign for intensive immigration into Canada had been started from Ottawa.

The Opposition leader said that he was more interested in the vital problem of immigration than in playing politics with the question. What should be paramount to all Canadians, he said, was the maintenance of the supremacy of Canadians in Canada.

The first speaker of the afternoon, Rosario Lorrain, N. U., Papineau, said that it was high time for the province of Quebec to make known its opinion on immigration. He congratulated his leader for raising the issue.

Mr. Lorrain said that it was not a question of race or religion, as the member for St-Louis had tried to present it before the House. What was intended by the National Union party, was to preserve this province against an influx of foreigners having no knowledge of Canadian mentality, and, in some cases, adverse to it.

FOR a long time now, John Bull, Uncle Sam and Johnnie Canuck have been doing business together. Today, more than ever, we are united in a common purpose.

Side by side, Canadians, Americans and Englishmen march along the road that leads to final victory. On the hot sands of North Africa, on the slopes of Sicily and Italy, our men have fought well together . . . given strength one to the other. Now, we look forward to the peace . . . and the ways in which we can preserve it.

Future world security rests to a large extent upon continued co-operation between the British Commonwealth and the United States. Of all nations, Canada is best situated to assure such co-operation. For we, of Canada . . . a major member of the British Commonwealth, have long been a close friend and neighbour of the United States. We know and like them both so well, we are the common meeting-ground for mutual understanding. Thus will Canada help the world to Win the Peace!

Hitler's War Against The Code of Sinai

Those possessed of spiritual illumination have with almost the very rise of Nazism discovered that Hitler was out not only for Lebensraum but to uproot the Zeitgeist of western culture which finds its inspiration in the Ten Commandments. However, the mass of peoples failed to have discerned the real purport of Nazism for a long time. The world, therefore, generally failed to see that the attack upon the Jew by the Nazi barbarians was really the war made by them against the Jewish spirit made manifest in great religion, Christianity, liberalism and democracy.

We are now supported in this thesis by the testimony of Herman Rauschning who, in his preface to the notable collection of ten short novels based on and entitled "The Ten Commandents", by Armin L. Robinson, writes about his conferences with Hitler, Albert Forster, Goebbels and Streicher, in the Reich Chancery in Berlin, just before Danzig was taken over by the Nazis. Streicher argued during this meeting that "the Christian religion is nothing but a Jewish sect . . . We don't fight only the Christian circles, we fight against the Christian ideas."

"That's right. After the destruction of Judaism, the extinction of Christian slave morals must follow logically." "There is much more behind this," Hitler began fanatically. "It is not merely a question of Christianity and Judaism. We are fighting against the most ancient curse that humanity has brought upon itself . . . That devilish 'thou shalt' and that stupid 'thou shalt not.' It's got to get out of our blood, that curse from Mount Sinai! That poison with which Jews and Christians have spoiled and soiled the free, wonderful instincts of man and lowered them to the level of doglike fright."

What a pity that when Rauschning, back in 1937, tried [illegible] to liberate himself and his followers from the discipline of Sinai and is attempting to murder every form of morality and human culture. For Hitler's Mein Kampf is battling against the Hebrew-Christian Bible.

We are delightful that ten of the great novelists of our day have collaborated, each interpreting one of the Ten Commandments through a short novel indicating how the commandment fares under the impact of Nazi paganism. The purpose of this volume, this notable volume, is to make articulate the ideals for which we of the United Nations are in truth fighting. It has been observed by many students that the Nazi soldiers are so well indoctrinated in the philosophy of Nazism that they therefore fight with a psychic power and unbounding zeal. For thousands of years the code of Sinai has been taught and, alas, too often has been taken for granted. It is good, therefore, to propagandize in the cause of the Sinai Code and give greater articulation to our ideas.

The great Thomas Mann in his unique manner of writing interprets the first commandment in this collection. He vividly sketches the life of Moses and does not, in the main, follow the Biblical narrative. But the novel based on "I am God—and thou shalt have no other God" is a masterpiece and Freudian in nature. Moses, according to Thomas Mann, is the first to articulate The Eternal Truth which binds in covenant God and the human race. Men will arise to negate the eternal truth. The world as a result will be bathed in blood. Ultimately the eternal truth will triumph and God will be reaffirmed.

The novel that appeals to us most is the one by Franz Werfel who interprets the Third commandment—"Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord Thy God in vain." Here Werfel depicts for us life in a small Carpathian border town where dwell in peace Austrians, Slovaks, gypsies and ten Jewish families. Father Felix is the priest of this town and his great friend is the young Rabbi. Priest and Rabbi have a profound appreciation for each other's religions. And why not? Jew and Christian, are they not meant to suffer for the same truths? If Jews should cease to exist, then the Christians would cease to exist.

On that famous black Friday on which the Nazis take over, the Rabbi asks advice of the priest whether Jewish families should flee the town. The priest urges him not to give up since the new regime is bound not to last. But the next day the Jewish property is expropriated and all Jews are ordered to leave. At the border they are halted because of no visas. The Nazis tease and torment them despite the intercessions of Father Felix in behalf of the Jews. The climax comes when the Nazi leader snatches a cross from a pauper's grave nearby and by attaching two arms converts the cross into a swastika. "That", he tells Rabbi and Priest, "is what you'll worship." Thereupon, the Rabbi calmly takes the cross and removes the professing arms and restores the cross to the priest. What remarkable symbolism of Jewish-Christian brotherhood is evidence by this gesture!

Soon the small band is told to cross the border into Hungary. As they do they are betrayed and shot down.

Memorable, too, in this volume are the contributions of Rebecca West, John Erskine, Bruno Frank, Jules Romains, Andre Maurois, Sigrid Undset, Hendrik Van Loon and Louis Bromfield. Thus great artists of the pen have lifted the pen to war upon the Nazi sword. The sword may triumph for a little while but ultimately the spirit triumphs.

The Nazi doctrines can not sprout the moral code of Sinai. Nazism will fade and suffer the fate of other "isms" which attempted to demoralize and therefore dactivilize man. The Nazis are now but worshipping the golden calf. They desperately hope against hope to capture Mount Sinai and perhaps take God in protective custody and make Nazism, the religion of barbarism dominate the world.

But God in the language of the Psalmist laughs at the evil-doers and leads them to speedy doom. As the war is drawing to a climax and reshaping of life is bound to take place, we are in need of that type of literature as is evidenced in this volume, as a moral protest and a crusade against ler ideology.

Chazak V'Nischazak

On March seventeenth our revered colleague and [illegible] voted friend, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, observed his [illegible] birthday, and messages of felicitations have come [illegible] from every section of the world where men are free [illegible] messages. How different it is to measure the [illegible] of Stephen S. Wise, one of the few great Jewish [illegible] our day! His entire ministry has been devoted [illegible] liberation of the human spirit. World Jewry and [illegible] have been his interests. He could never be parochial, [illegible] priestly. Prophetic in spirit, he dared and denounced [illegible] in high places who made of religion a sham and [illegible] translate it in terms of social justice and righteousness.

In these grim dark days for Israel we are thankful [illegible] such a brave spirit as Stephen S. Wise is at the [illegible] Jewish life. Because of his presence many of us [illegible] ship feel less lonely and we are encouraged to battle [illegible] and decency within Israel and in the larger field of [illegible]

With admiration, love and devotion we speak [illegible] hallowed Biblical words to our friend: Be strong and [illegible] strengthened—Chazak V'Nischazak.

"Sometimes when people censure me,
I tell them without answer
That for what it cost me to be free,
I might have had an answer."

The request of General George C. Marshall, American Chief of Staff, that Congress shelve the Wagner-Taft Palestine Resolution which would have put Congress on record as favoring Jewish immigration into Palestine, for the reason that the passage of the Resolution would lead to trouble with the Arabs, is seen as part of a situation in makeshift foreign policy cloaked as military expediency, by I. F. Stone in The Nation of March 18, in an article entitled "Palestine Run-Around" which this column will try to condense here in part and freely verbatim, without comment.

It is too often forgotten that Palestine is not a British colony but a mandate; that France gave up its claim to Palestine and the League granted the mandate on conditions that Britain establish a Jewish national home there; that this condition is also the basis on which the United States, in a separate treaty with Britain in 1925, accorded American recognition to the Palestine mandate. Article 6 of that treaty, like Article 6 of the League mandate, requires the Palestine Administration to "facilitate Jewish immigration under suitable conditions" and "encourage . . . close settlement by Jews on the land."

The Anglo-American treaty of 1925 says that its terms can not be changed without assent by the United States. The British White Paper of 1939 provided that Jewish immigration should be shut off entirely after five years "unless the Arabs of Palestine are prepared to acquiesce in it." This was called by Winston Churchill "plainly a breach and repudiation" of Britain's obligations, and therefore invalid without American approval. That the American Government has never given such approval President Roosevelt has just authorized Dr. Stephen S. Wise and Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver to say.

With General Marshall advising that the Resolution must be killed for military reasons and the President promising "full justice . . . to those who seek a Jewish national home", that is, with one appeasing the Arabs and the other not, it is not hard to understand why so cautious a man as Senator Taft publicly questioned the military reasons and called for the passage of his Resolution in spite of them. If military reasons made the measure unwise, a hint to the sponsors would have stopped them from introducing it. Senator Wagner, its co-sponsor in the Upper House, is a ranking member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, a devoted and responsible Administration supporter. The bill was introduced in the House on January 21 when Senator Taft learned from his brother, Charles P. Taft, an official of the State Department, that there would be no objections from [illegible] but not hostile. [illegible] House or Senate hearings which lasted from February 9 to February 17, but on February 23 a special session of the Senate Committee heard General Marshall and considered letters from Secretaries Hull and Stimson asking that action on the Resolution be deferred. Wagner and Taft, co-sponsors of the bill, were not present and they say that they were not informed of the meeting.

There is no reason to believe that the military situation changed between the time the bill was introduced and Marshall asked that it be shelved. Protests from Arab countries against the Resolution did not begin to arrive until March 1, several days after he testified. They look like a concerted attempt to ride in on the coat-tails of an arranged victory.

As far as the Zionists are concerned, they had conversations last year with Mr. Hull and Mr. Welles and were given to understand that it would be helpful to the State Department if Congress reasserted American policy in favor of a Jewish national home in Palestine. Two weeks before the Wagner-Taft bill was introduced, Rabbi Silver went to see Secretary Hull who indicated no opposition. For the humiliating defeat which the Zionists got, although they and their Congressional supporters had been given no reason to believe that their efforts were ill-timed or contrary to national interests, they were given private excuses in which the State Department blamed the War Department and the War Department blamed the State Department.

Were the Zionists led into a trap? Or were they the victim of last-minute pressure from the British Government? The Colonial Office and the Palestine Administration are generally anti-Zionist and pro-Arab, and intend to enforce the White Paper.

The Near East Division of the United States State Department, another important factor behind the scenes, shares the prejudices and antipathies of the British Colonial Office. Its leading Arab expert is Colonel Harold B. Hoskins, a New York cotton-goods merchant, born in Beirut of American missionaries, who returned from the Near East and circulated confidentially among Congressmen a report arguing against Jewish aspiration in Palestine.

Another influence hostile to a Jewish national home in Palestine is Brigadier-General Patrick J. Hurley, oil adviser, who returned from the Near East believing that Arabian oil is too important to be left "at the mercy of local conflict", implying that a liquidation of the Jewish national home effort might be the solution. I.f.s.

A Christian Protest Against Race Prejudice In Toronto

The following appeared as a letter from the Rev. [illegible] M. Freeman to the Toronto Star:

The Forest Hill council appears to be possessed [illegible] determination to lower the value of Forest Hill Village [illegible] estimation of responsible citizens. In recent months the [illegible] cil has given utterance to racial prejudices. The latest [illegible] festation of such views occurred Wednesday evening, [illegible] March 8th.

I refer to the adoption for a second time of a by-law [illegible] which is admittedly aimed at the elimination of a Jewish [illegible] school for religious instruction now located on Eglinton [illegible] nue. Advocates of this by-law argue that the school in question threatens property values. Personally I think the [illegible] prejudice of the Forest Hill council is far more dangerous to their values than any school.

I gather that the supporters of the by-law have tried to brand the advocates of the religious school as defiant of village regulations. A reliable person, present at the Wednesday meeting as a neutral observer, has reported to me that on the contrary the attitude of the Jewish delegation was respectful and dignified. As a Christian, the observer stated that the delegation manifested far more of the moral attitude he respects than did members of the council and opponents of the school.

As far as I can see, the by-law in question is a piece of pure racist legislation and as such a threat to our democratic institutions. The Ontario municipal board is to be commended as a guardian of civil rights in referring the [illegible] adoption of the by-law back to the council for reconsideration. I sincerely hope that the people of Ontario, through the municipal board, will not allow this second adoption of the by-law to become effective.

As a Christian I take this opportunity to express my complete opposition to such anti-Semitic legislation, and to add that I certainly favor the right of any religious group to provide facilities for the religious instruction of its youth, especially as in this instance where the instruction is to be given after public school hours in a separate building, thus embodying the valuable principle of the separation of church and state.

Jew-Baiting In The Polish Army

The London, England, Jewish Chronicle says:

The appointment by the Polish authorities of a special Commission to investigate allegations of anti-Semitism in the Polish Army is a welcome step, if only because it suggests a desire to set right a wrong concerning the existence of which a prima facie case has certainly been made out. As a point of fact there has been grave evidence recently of anti-Jewish and, judging from the latest reports, anti-[illegible] [illegible] be carried out without delay.

One thing it is only right to emphasize. No [illegible] merely to stifle complaints or to pretend to the outside world that anti-Jewish manifestations in the Polish Army [illegible] exist, can be expected to succeed, and the Polish Government in London is, we believe, sufficiently wise to recognize the fact, as well as democratic enough in outlook not even to attempt to hide any palpable and serious wrongs done to its own nationals enrolled in the defence of the national cause. We need add that Jews have never underrated the difficulties of eradicating anti-Jewish sentiment in certain sections of the Polish people. But the occasions for undesirable friction that may open up and the consequent injury to Allied interests, to which it is fraught plainly demand a determined and [illegible] all, sustained front against it. Jew-baiting in an Army fighting for freedom is a monster of illogicality. There is [illegible] one way with it: it must be rooted out — and that relentlessly.

"Is it genuine fear of an Arab uprising—or is it merely a pipe-dream or a dream of a pipe-line—that prompts this appeasement of Arab puppets?" he said. "Appeasement is a blood brother of selfish interest and a progenitor and breeder of violence. For this government to accept even tacitly such a policy at this time is to invite future trouble to overgrow up to our doorsteps and [illegible] precautionary note now of [illegible] consequences to others or [illegible] ourselves."
